

UPPSALA
UNIVERSITET

Department of Economic History

The Department of Economic History at Uppsala University (Sweden) is offering a three-year Browaldh Post-doc fellowship (with the possibility of a three-year extension) in Financial History.

The Department will appoint a post-doc to a full-time research position for three consecutive years, with the possibility of renewal for a further three years. The appointed postdoc will be free to formulate research in financial history. The position may be combined with a small teaching load. The appointed postdoc should preferably start work in January 2025, but this starting date can be negotiated within reasonable limits.

The position is financed by a personal stipend, the Browaldh stipend, provided by Handelsbanken/Jan Wallanders och Tom Hedelius stiftelse and Tore Browaldhs stiftelse, which covers living expenses, expenses for conferences, literature, etc., as well as funds for personal insurance. For general insurance for residents, see the Swedish social and health care system: Move to Sweden - Försäkringskassan \(forsakringskassan.se\)

The appointee is expected to have the Department of Economic History as his/her base, but it will be possible to work as a guest researcher in other academic environments during the post-doctoral period. Stays longer than six months must be negotiated with the donor, Jan Wallanders och Tom Hedelius stiftelse and Tore Browaldhs stiftelse. The position is not a formal appointment in the department and is therefore not subject to the Swedish Employment Protection Act. It is also not automatically part of the academic career system at Uppsala University. However, it is possible to extend the fellowship for another three years after a new application has been submitted by the department.

The Department of Economic History at Uppsala University is an active research and teaching department with a full graduate programme. Uppsala is Sweden's fourth most populous city and home to the oldest university in the Nordic countries, located 40 minutes from Stockholm city centre and 20 minutes from Stockholm Arlanda International Airport. The Department is home to a vibrant research environment with a wide range of topics, and our research also has a long tradition of focusing on different aspects of financial history such as international economic relations, global political economy, capital flows and international monetary systems, international trade, the impact of tariffs, wars, bilateralism/multilateralism, exchange rate arrangements, monetary policy, etc.

Recruitment procedure

Candidates must have obtained a PhD in a field relevant to the position no earlier than 1 January 2019. Special circumstances (documented parental leave, sick leave, etc.) will be taken into account. The deadline for applications is 15 August 2024.

Recruitment will take place in two steps:

The first step is to express interest in the position by sending a short CV (maximum five pages) and a PhD certificate by e-mail to the Research Director, Professor Anders Ögren, at anders.ogren@ekhist.uu.se.

This mail should be sent no later than 15 August 2024.

In the second step, applicants will receive a link to a Box account, where they should upload the following application documents in digitalised form (preferably pdf)

1. PhD certificates and other relevant degrees or appointments.
2. CURRICULUM VITAE
3. Research plan (maximum 5 pages)
4. List of publications
5. Doctoral thesis (and any information on it as a thesis report/reviews, if available)
6. Maximum of five publications (other than the thesis)
7. Two to four referees with contact details
8. Possible teaching experience (to be confirmed by the relevant director of studies)

This material should be uploaded no later than 1 September 2024.

After the deadline, the Recruitment Committee will select a short list of candidates based primarily on their potential as international researchers. The assessment of the candidates will focus on the productivity, quality and scope of firstly their research merits, secondly their research plan, thirdly teaching experience and other academic merits. Candidates will be invited for interviews in October. The final decision will be taken in mid-November.

Contact

Any questions can be addressed to the Director of research professor Anders Ögren at anders.ogren@ekhist.uu.se or the Head of department Kristina Lilja at kristina.lilja@ekhist.uu.se.